Managing and leading remote staff and teams is an uncomfortable situation for many who supervise the work of others. While the best practices of managing and leading people still apply, the virtual environment has its own set of challenges. The tips below are intended for you to consider more deeply how you show up as a manager and leader.

Acknowledge their Situation

When beginning to work remotely, expect your team to have a variety of expressed and unexpressed emotions about their new work situation. Some